
New Ceylon Writing 5

NEW CEYLON WRITING announces the publication of its fifth issue. In August 1983 Sri Lanka experienced the worst outbreak of racial violence the island has seen since, in Tarzie Vitachi's words, "the Fifth Horseman of the Apocalypse — Race Hate — rode into Ceylon in May 1958 without fuss or warning." Now, a year later, NEW CEYLON WRITING 5 takes as its theme "the multi-ethnic character that defines the nature and spirit of the land." It brings together in a single publication selections from what Sri Lankan writers of every creed and community have had to say on the subject in historical commentary, social analysis, poetry, and fiction over a period of some fifty years. It offers in addition a day-by-day commentary on the events of July/August 1983 in Sri Lanka and on their aftermath, the complete text of Lakshmi de Silva's English verse translation of Ediriwira Sarachchandra's play Sinhabahu, and 19 pages of book and play reviews.

Priced at Rs. 100/- for readers in Sri Lanka, and at $10 (U.S. or Australian) for readers overseas, copies of NEW CEYLON WRITING 5 may be obtained from K. V. G. de Silva & Co., booksellers of Colombo and Kandy, or direct from the editorial office in Sydney. Please indicate clearly the number of copies required, and direct payment (by cheque or bank draft payable to "Yasmine Gooneratne, Editor NEW CEYLON WRITING" to Yasmine Gooneratne, Editor, NEW CEYLON WRITING, School of English & Linguistics, Macquarie University, North Ryde, NSW 2113, Australia.
