

Notes on Contributors

Chen Yongguo is Associate Professor of English at Tsinghua University, Beijing. He has translated several of Fredric Jameson's books into Chinese and conducts research on translation studies.

Arif Dirlik is Professor of History at University of Oregon. He is the author of several books, including After the Revolution: Waking in the Global Capitalism (1994); editor of What Is the Rim? Critical Perspectives on the Pacific Region Idea (1993); and coeditor, with Rob Wilson, of Asia/Pacific as Space of Cultural Production (1994).

Mark Fullerton was born in Benito, Manitoba in 1961. After graduating from the University of Calgary with a B.A. in French, he pursued graduate studies in Toronto and Waterloo, Ontario. He has just published a book of poetry entitled Apprenticeship Papers.

Paul Karan is a widely published poet whose writing has appeared in The Maryland Poetry Review, Queen's Quarterly, and The Antigonish Review.

Lewis MacLeod is a Killam postdoctoral fellow at the University of Alberta. He writes about the African, the West Indian, and the contemporary British novel.

Pamela McCallum is Professor of English at the University of Calgary. She has recently written an introduction to a new edition of Raymond Williams's Modern Tragedy.

J. Hillis Miller is Distinguished Professor of English and Comparative Literature at the University of California, Irvine, USA. His many books include Tropes, Parables and Performances: Essays on Twentieth-Century Literature, Illustrations, and Black Holes.

Bruce Robbins is Professor of English at Columbia University. His most recent publications are Feeling Global: Internationalism in Distress (1999) and Cosmopolitics: Thinking and Feeling beyond the Nation (1998), co-edited with Pheng Cheah

Ashraf H. A. Rushdy, Professor of African American Studies and English at Wesleyan University, is the author of The Empty Garden, Neo-Slave Narratives, and Remembering Generations.

Julia Schroeder is an Ontario writer whose work has also appeared in the Vancouver magazine A Room of One's Own.

Contributors

Helene Strauss is a doctoral candidate at the University of Western Ontario. She is currently working on a dissertation entitled The Politics of Theoretical Exchange: Creolization and Post-apartheid South African Literature.

Cynthia Sugars is Assistant Professor in the Department of English at the University of Ottawa, where she teaches Canadian literature and postcolonial theory. She is the author of numerous articles and reviews on Canadian literature, and is currently editing a collection of essays for Broadview Press entitled Unhomely States: Theorizing English-Canadian Postcolonialism.

Harry Vandervlist teaches twentieth century literature at the University of Calgary. He recently edited the work of Banff poet Jon Whyte.

Wang Fengzhen is Research Fellow in the Institute of Foreign Literature at the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, Beijing, China. He has published on literary theory, globalization, and cultural studies.

Wang Liya is Associate Professor of English at Beijing Normal University. Her research interests are literary theory and cultural studies.

Rob Wilson is Professor of Literature at the University of California at Santa Cruz, and for 2004-2005 is a Visiting Professor of Film Studies at the Korea National University of the Arts in Seoul. His works include Reimagining the American Pacific (Duke UP, 2000), Waking in Seoul (Mineumsa Press, 1988) and American Sublime (U of Wisconsin P, 1991) and the co-edited collections Global/Local (Duke UP, 1996) and Asia/Pacific as Space of Cultural Production (Duke UP, 1995). He is presently at work on a study of conversion and counter-conversion in the Pacific called Henry, Torn From the Stomach and a collection of cultural criticism called Worldings: Doing Cultural Studies in the Era of Globalization forthcoming this spring with New Pacific Press.

Shaobo Xie is Associate Professor of English at the University of Calgary. His research interests are postcolonialism, globalization, and cultural studies.