articles on totalitarianism, diaspora, slavery, human rights, and more
Contents vol. 42.3-4

1 Editor’s Notes by Shaobo Xie

Articles

5 Textual Territory and Narrative Power in Junot Díaz’s The Brief Wondrous Life of Oscar Wao by Richard Patteson

21 “The Sea is History”: Opium, Colonialism, and Migration in Amitav Ghosh’s Sea of Poppies by Anupama Arora

43 Neo-Slave Narratives in Contemporary Black British Fiction by Sofía Muñoz-Valdivieso

61 Unofficial Collections: Organic/Artifactual Documents and the (Re)inscription of the Civic Archive in Michael Ondaatje’s In the Skin of a Lion by Samuel Pane

89 Time Without Partitions: Midnight’s Children and Temporal Orientalism by Adam Barrows

103 “People set apart”: Representations of Jewishness in the Fiction of Salman Rushdie by Anna Guttman

121 Between Worlds: Imagining Diaspora in Danticat’s The Dew Breaker and Chancy’s The Spirit of Haiti by Jo Collins

143 Family History, Food, and Marketing Ethnicity in Helen Tse’s Sweet Mandarin by Rocío G. Davis

163 Asian Transnational Adoption: Subject and Trauma in Life Narratives of Korean Adoptees and Gish Jen’s The Love Wife by Fu-jen Chen

197 Visions of an Incurable Rationalist: Leonard Woolf’s Stories of the East by Catherine Nelson-McDermott

217 Imperial Fantasies: Mourning the Loss of Empire in the Novels of Penelope Lively and Ruth Prawer Jhabvala by Kathleen Williams Renk
237 The Poetics of Postcolonial Atrocity: Dalit Life Writing, Testimonio, and Human Rights by Pramod K. Nayar

265 The Thousand Faces of Night: A Counter-Narrative of Bleeding Womanhood by Eiko Ohira

279 “Nothing, Not a Scrap of Identity”: Janet Frame’s Vision of Self and Knowledge in A State of Siege by Cindy Gabrielle

301 Reconcile, Reconciled: A New Reading of Reconciliation in J.M. Coetzee’s Disgrace by Benjamin Ogden

315 Poster Children: Laurens van der Post’s Imperial Propaganda in A Far Off Place by Marcia K. Farrell

perspective

333 Tightrope Walker Vision: Something of Language, Home, and History in David Malouf’s Remembering Babylon by Lamia Tayeb

postcolonial performance

345 On stage with d’bi.young anitafrika and word! sound! powah! by Hyacinth M. Simpson

reviews

365 J. Hillis Miller. The Conflagration of Community: Fiction before and after Auschwitz. (Adrienne Kertzer)

369 Rumina Sethi. The Politics of Postcolonialism: Empire, Nation and Resistance. (Uzoma Esonwanne)

372 Laura Wright. Wilderness into Civilized Shapes: Reading the Postcolonial Environment. (Sungfu Tsai)

374 Paul Williams. Race, Ethnicity and Nuclear War: Representations of Nuclear Weapons and Post-Apocalyptic Worlds. (Matthew D. Kriz)

377 Notes on Contributors
ariel

Senior Editor Shaobo Xie
Editors Michael Tavel Clarke
Faye Halpern
Reviews Editor David Oakleaf
Editorial Assistants Sheba Rahim
Allison Mader
Administrative Assistant Brigitte Clarke

Editorial Board Nancy Batty Red Deer College; Bart Beaty University of Calgary; Jill Didur Concordia University; Kit Dobson Mount Royal University; Gugu Hlongwane St. Mary’s University; Clara Joseph University of Calgary; Jon Kertzer University of Calgary; Sara Salih University of Toronto.

International Advisory Board Bruce Bennett Australian Defence Force Academy; David Dabydeen Warwick University; Graham Huggan Leeds University; Shirley Geoklin Lim University of California (Santa Barbara); Mbulelo Mzamane University of Fort Hare; Shyamala Narayan Jamia Millia Islamia (New Delhi); Richard Nile Curtin University of Technology (Australia Research Institute); Kenneth Ramchand University of West Indies (St. Augustine); Susie Tharu Central Institute of English & Foreign Language (India); Gauri Viswanathan Columbia University; Robert Young Oxford University.
ARIEL Special Issue
Call for Papers:
Postcolonial Ecocriticisms among Settler-Colonial Nations

As Helen Tiffin and Graham Huggan suggest in Postcolonial Ecocriticism, approaching postcolonialism and ecocriticism as correctives for one another perpetuates the assumptions that postcolonialism appeals only to anthropocentric values while ecocriticism attends solely to eco-/bio-centric views. Postcolonial-ecocritical approaches have the capacity to work in complementary ways, illustrating the constitutive relations between social and environmental concerns.

This special issue of ARIEL on postcolonial ecocriticisms is situated in the wake of recent critical efforts such as Postcolonial Green, Postcolonial Ecologies, and Wilderness into Civilized Shapes. We seek articles that focus on contemporary cultural production from specific settler-colonial spaces: Aotearoa-New Zealand, Australia, Canada, and South Africa. Acknowledging the ways these regions have generally been considered together as “white settler colonies” with shared histories as Commonwealth nations, the guest editors of this special issue assume, like Annie E. Coombes in Rethinking Settler Colonialism, that the similar “administrative structures and civic institutions” provide a basis from which to begin considering the heterogeneous ways in which settler colonials in these countries positioned themselves vis-à-vis Indigenous communities. In other words, the limited geographical scope of this special issue aims to both acknowledge the historical (if problematic) grouping of these nations as settler-colonial societies and encourage different strategies for thinking the connections between them.
The guest editors are particularly interested in comparative papers about contemporary and emergent writers and texts not commonly studied either beyond their nations’ respective borders or from within the merged perspectives of postcolonialism and ecocriticism. A focus on contemporary writers, in particular young and emerging writers, stems from the supposition that their contemporaneity enables them to address and challenge “postcolonial” and “ecocritical” concerns that have themselves emerged out of decades of postcolonial and ecocritical studies.

Possible topics include, but are not limited to, the following:

- environmental justice
- nonhuman animals
- ecologies of war/animals at war
- eco-cosmopolitanism
- Truth & Reconciliation
- spatial organization
- resource extraction/depletion
- SF/speculative fiction
- science (western and non-western)
- poverty
- ecological/environmental
diaspora

- ecological imperialism
- food systems/agribusiness
- biopolitics/biotechnologies
- water
- ecopoetry
- national parks/conservation areas
- narratives of retreat/back to the land
- human-animal relations
- homecoming/notions of belonging
- coastlines/oceans
- desertification

Please send 250-word proposals to guest editors Travis V. Mason, Elzette Steenkamp, and Lisa Szabo-Jones at <PocoEcoIssue@gmail.com>. Deadline for submissions is 13 July 2012.
Correction

An inaccurate biography of André Narbonne was printed in ARIEL 42.2. The following is the correct information:

André Narbonne received his PhD from the University of Western Ontario. His teaching and research interests include Victorian and Edwardian Canadian humour. He has recently published on L.M. Montgomery and Don Harron, and an article on Thomas Carlyle’s inverse sublime is forthcoming in Nineteenth-Century Studies.

We apologize for the error.