The Letters of George Meredith

Edited by C. L. CLINE

Since the publication of George Meredith's letters by his son in 1912, many new letters have come to light. This new edition contains about 3000 letters as compared with the 767 of the earlier one; it includes the poet's letters to the Misses Lawrence, previously inaccessible, and complete texts of the letters to Admiral Maxse and Leslie Stephen, from which Meredith's son had deleted personal details. Three volumes £15/15/-

Letters of Arnold Bennett

Volume III 1916-1931

Edited by JAMES HEPBURN

'Reading Arnold Bennett's correspondence is a comfortable and comforting experience. So many writers, in their letters and diaries, reveal themselves as vain, petty, and paranoid, but Bennett in his appears as the man he was — modest, generous, loyal, curious, and untiringly interested in the enduring pleasures of life. . . . This is the third volume of his letters, admirably edited by James Hepburn.' — Margaret Drabble in The Guardian 2 plates 84/-

Letters of John Keats

A new selection

Edited by ROBERT GITTINGS

To this new edition of 170 of Keats's letters Robert Gittings, the poet's biographer, brings a thorough knowledge of the manuscript sources as well as a special sympathy for his subject. Each letter is printed in full, exactly as Keats wrote it. Mr Gittings supplies invaluable annotation, a chronology, and bibliography for this paperback which replaces the World's Classics edition. 20/- Oxford Paperbacks

The Narrative Art of Charles Dickens

The Rhetoric of Sympathy and Irony in His Novels

H. P. SUCKSMITH

Dr Sucksmith distinguishes between simple and complex rhetoric in the novels and argues that some of Dickens's greatest strengths as well as weaknesses can be viewed in terms of his rhetoric. In examining what he calls 'the rhetoric of sympathy and irony' he introduces a new concept, that of 'the complex effect', which he relates to the language, structure, characterization, and vision in Dickens's novels.
