THE AIR OF REALITY: NEW ESSAYS ON HENRY JAMES

Edited by John Goode

There is a new generation of critics with a particular interest in Henry James, and it is the intention of this collection of original essays to give a representative sample of its flavour. Using a wide variety of methods, ranging from close reading to detailed historical placing, the contributors are provocative and radical. They include John Lucas on Washington Square, Juliet Mitchell on What Maisie Knew, Gabriel Pearson on The Golden Bowl, Bernard Richards on The Ambassadors and The Sacred Fount and — in what amounts to a major statement on the art of fiction — D. J. Gordon and John Stokes on The Tragic Muse. £4.85

JOHN DONNE: ESSAYS IN CELEBRATION

Edited by A. J. Smith

This volume honours the 400th anniversary of Donne's birth with sixteen original essays from various hands. These discuss his reputation, the circulation of his poems in manuscript, his use of rhetoric, many different aspects of his verse, the influence of Machiavelli and several other topics. Together they reflect the great variety of scholarship in Donne studies and form a valuable and original conspectus of recent work. £6.00

THE EIGHTEENTH-CENTURY ENGLISH STAGE

Edited by Kenneth Richards and Peter Thomson

The eighteenth century produced more inventive actors than fine dramatists, and it displayed its actors to increasing advantage as theatre management became more expert, and stage design more ambitious. The eleven papers collected here, originally read at a Manchester University symposium in July 1971, follow this historical emphasis. The book's particular value lies in its bringing together several well-informed explorations of often neglected aspects of eighteenth-century theatre. £3.50

RENAISSANCE STUDIES

Six Essays

Edited by

I. D. MCFARLANE

A. H. ASHE

D. D. R. OWEN

The six essays in this volume offer a valuable contribution to Renaissance studies by distinguished scholars in the field and are mainly concerned with Neo-Latin writings and the French poetry of the Pléiade and its satellites. J. IJSEWIJN contributes an edition of a hitherto unpublished work of Alexander Hegius, who is currently receiving increased critical attention. I. D. MCFARLANE offers a preliminary history of George Buchanan's Psalm paraphrases, which should stimulate further interest and research in the motivation and sources of that outstanding humanist. GRAHAME CASTOR explores the key theme of illusion on Ronsard's poetry, while MALCOLM QUAINTON concerns himself with problems of sources in Jean-Antoine de Baif, who until recently has not received as much attention as his work merits. CHRISTOPHER SMITH reassesses the tragedies of Jacques de la Taille at an opportune moment in view of the present reappraisal of Neoclassical tragedy in Renaissance France. The volume is completed by a bibliographical note by PETER SHARRATT, who reports the discovery of an unknown Amyot edition.

The Approach to Fiction:

Good and Bad Readings of Novels

Douglas Hewitt

Lecturer in the Department of Extra-Mural Studies
University of Oxford

Novels are very varied; any attempt to produce a comprehensive theory of fiction ends in distorting books to fit it. Douglas Hewitt's study therefore sets out to consider what are the right and wrong ways to approach the different types of novel. Throughout it stresses both the ways in which writers try to make us see their novels aright, and the responsibility of readers to respond to these directions. Mr Hewitt uses The Way We Live Now, Little Dorritt and Crochet Castle as the starting points for his detailed analyses, and the book is illustrated by reference to a wide range of nineteenth- and twentieth-century English, American and European novels.

Twentieth Century Literary Criticism

A Reader

David Lodge

Lecturer in the Department of English, University of Birmingham

This Reader meets a real need in collecting between the covers of a single volume representative work by fifty modern literary critics of the twentieth century. While the basic orientation of the anthology is towards English and American literature and criticism, certain continental European writers are included, whose ideas have influenced Anglo-American criticism. The editor's aim has been to select essays and extracts which are not merely examples of good critical writing, but which also illustrate distinctive and contrasting critical methods.

The contents are arranged chronologically, allowing the reader to follow the historical development of modern criticism; but alternative lists of contents are provided which group the materials according to the topics or genres discussed and according to the critical method adopted. The historical and methodological significance of each item is further brought out in the editor's introductions which give concise biographical and bibliographical information about each author.

Maria Edgeworth

A Literary Biography

Marilyn Butler

Maria Edgeworth has been variously described as founder of the regional novel, as an influence on Scott, even as a more important novelist than Jane Austen. This, the first full-scale biography and literary study, is based on unpublished material and throws fresh life on her personal and literary life. 5 plates £6.50

The Mystery of Edwin Drood

Charles Dickens

Edited by Margaret Cardwell

The Mystery of Edwin Drood is the second volume to appear in the Clarendon Dickens, and the first edition to present texts based on all available evidence and freed from the corruptions of modern reprints. An introduction traces the history of composition; the appendixes include reproductions of manuscript plans and notes on the illustrations. All Fildes's illustrations and Collins's original sketch for the cover are reproduced. 1 drawing 16 plates

Out of Battle

The Poetry of the Great War

Jon Silkin

'Silkin's pity and indignation are held on a tight leash of reason and fairness and they never slop over into sentimentality or rant; it is an honest and honourable book and it should find a permanent place in the literature dealing with the Great War.' — VERNON SCANNELL in the New Statesman. £5

An Introduction to the Australian Novel 1830-1930

Barry Argyle

This book analyses eleven novels to establish their Australian qualities and relate them to the older English and European traditions. The author believes that Australian literature is as accessible and rewarding to foreigners as to Australians, and that recent writers like Patrick White, Martin Boyd, and Randolph Stow are writing within a tradition longer and more varied than is usually admitted. £4

Oxford University Press

The Ballad and the Folk

DAVID BUCHAN

Department of English Studies, University of Stirling, Scotland

Examines the ballad, and relates it closely to the society which produced it. The study focuses on the regional tradition of the Northeast of Scotland, the most fertile ballad area in Britain, and combines both social history and literary analysis. Provides a convincing explanation of the ballads' perennial appeal and an answer to the 'ballad enigma'. £4.50
