Over ten years, Third World Quarterly has established a reputation as the leading journal in the field of international politics and current affairs relating to the Third World.

It now directs its unique blend of scholarship and opinion towards literature:

A NEW SPACE FOR WORLD LITERATURE

In each issue, over fifty pages of articles, essays, profiles and extensive review coverage are devoted to the contemporary literatures of Latin America, the Caribbean, Africa, Asia and the Middle East, with consideration also to Black British and Black American writing.

THIRD WORLD QUARTERLY'S LITERATURE SECTION:

- offers a forum to writers and poets, as well as critics and translators, for informed and often impassioned debate on Third World realities and Third World writing
- draws on a wide range of contributors who combine literary expertise with understanding of the political, historical and cultural forces shaping Third World writers and their work;
- guides the reader through the proliferation of English-language publications and translations of fiction, poetry, drama, autobiography, travel writing and literary criticism - from world famous names to relatively unknown, emerging talents.

RECENT AND FORTHCOMING ISSUES INCLUDE:

- Mario Vargas Llosa on the fictions of Borges
- Nuruiddin Farah on Why I Write
- Mongane Wally Serote on post-Sharpeville poetry: a poet's view
- Nadia Hijab on Palestine revisited through the imagination
- Mark McWalt on Derek Walcott: an island poet and his sea
- Frances Wood on Chinese lives

The Literature of Travel

ARIEL invites submissions for a special issue on the Literature of Travel. This number will address material ranging from the literature of exploration to contemporary travel writing, the politics of the travelogue and travel guide, and travel writing in less conventional senses. A selection of poetry appropriate to the number will also be included. Planned for October 1990, the issue will be co-edited by I. S. MacLaren, of the University of Alberta.

Submissions should reach the editors by 31 May 1990.
