

Hawthorn

winter's glazed over
both berries and thorns

now memory's smoothed
to the fingertips, and cold

summer seems far off now pain hard to imagine

each hanging red globe
now a drop of blood

ARTHUR BULL.